WOULD MAKE TAX LEVY MANDATORY

County Fair Managers Will Renew
Effort to Get Favorable Bill
Through Legislature.

SECRETARY KING ATTENDS

Would Mean Appropriation of $2,000
From County Annually—Repeated Attempts Made Here.

At the annual business meeting of the County Fair Managers' Association at the Statehouse in Indianapolis this week, which was attended by Will L. King, secretary of the Rush County Fair Association, it was finally decided to read the word "shall" to take the place of the word "may" into the Indiana county fair statute, and a lobby was formed to bring what pressure it could to bear on the legislature to further the interests of the county fairs in the Hoosier State.

The same bill was introduced in the 1911 legislature. It provides that boards of county commissioners shall give aid to county fairs to a maximum amount of 1 cent on each $100 of taxables in the county, the money to be used in paying premiums for all exhibits except speed contests.

The bill did not get very far in the legislature two years ago. It passed the senate successfully and managers of county fairs were elated, but the boom was punctured by the house which failed to pass the bill. Because of the influence back of the bill this year, it is believed that it will be passed.

The proposal has special significance in Rush county, as repeated efforts have been made by the directors of the Rush County Fair Association to get the county council to appropriate the amount allowed by the law to keep the fair from going to rack and ruin.

The county council has steadfastly refused to make the appropriation because the law is not mandatory. If the present bill is passed, it will be mandatory and the county council will be compelled to appropriate the amount. Local fair directors believe it will contain an emergency clause, if passed, so that it will be in effect immediately after its passage and that the appropriation can be made at once so that the money can be used to advantage for next year's fair.

The one cent tax on every hundred dollars worth of taxable property in Rush county would amount to about two thousand dollars. The fair directors say that this would be a lifesaver in a time of dire need and that it would pull the county fair out of the hole so that it could be made a successful venture.

Last year the receipts lacked seven or eight hundred dollars of paying actual running expenses. With the two thousand dollars from this special appropriation, fair directors believe they could give Rush county people a better fair, make money and at the same time repair the buildings, which are about ready to fall down.

Last fall the directors called a special meeting to consider ways and means to make the fair a paying proposition. The first effort was a failure, but finally, on Saturday, November 16, fifty or more stockholders gathered in the court house assembly room.

One of the methods decided on to make the fair receipts greater was to discontinue the annual pass for stockholders and their families. This met with opposition but was finally passed, 24 to 17. All stockholders will have to pay the regular admission hereafter.

It was proposed that a legislative

JAIL VACANT SINCE DEC. 30

No Prisoners For Nine Days is Near Record.

The police are wondering what has caused the sudden decrease in police business. The county jail has not held a prisoner for nine days. The last man to serve a sentence was Bert Elder and he completed his term December 30. This is said to be a record for recent years. Since Chief McAllister has been on the force this is the first time the jail has been empty. Mac says the regulars are still riding the water wagon.

SNOW PROTECTS THE WHEAT CROP

Farmers Pleased Because Fall Precedes Zero Weather That is Forecast by Bureau.

HEAVY RAINS BIG BENEFIT

Farmers were very much pleased to see the snow come along with the drop in temperature this morning because any severe winter weather without a covering for the wheat crop would have been very damaging. One farmer said today that he hoped a thick mantle of snow would cover the earth before any zero weather arrived. The prospects for a good wheat crop are very bright now and it is hoped that nothing will injure it.

Almost as helpful as today's snow were the rains of the last few days. The wheat needed moisture very much for there was a greater scarcity of it during December. Farmers believe it was the driest December in years.

MORRIS WINSHIP IS EXONERATED

Architect of Newcastle Fire Station
Says Rushville Contractor is Not to Blame.

DELAY IN COMPLETING IT

Morris Winship, the Rushville contractor who has been criticized in Newcastle because of the delay in completing the new fire station there, was exonerated of all blame by the architect for the building at the meeting of the Newcastle city council this week. The Newcastle Courier says:

C. H. Bacon, architect, and M. M. Winship, contractor, in charge of the building of the new fire station on Grand avenue, appeared before the council and explained the delay in completing the building. The architect took the blame for the delay and lifted all censure from the contractor.

The unfinished condition of the structure is due to delay in securing the proper kind of hardware for the doors. It can now be secured and the building will be ready for acceptance by the council at its next meeting.

CHARITY FORCES FORM SOCIETY

Civic Improvement Idea is Included in New Organization Which is Perfecting in Rushville.

CONSTITUTION IS DRAWN UP

Provides For Executive, Advisory and Nine Standing Committees
And States Objects.

The various interests associated in charity work in Rushville formed a permanent organization at their meeting in the court house assembly yesterday afternoon. Henceforth the organization, instead of the federated charities, will be known as The Social Service and Civic Improvement Association of Rushville.

A rather lengthy constitution was adopted which provides for further organization, time of meetings, objects and the general principles.

The association will be non-sectarian and non-partisan and one of its chief objects will be to promote harmony between persons and organizations interested in charity. Other objects of the association are to reduce vagrancy, help deserving cases of destitution, check imposters who take advantage of generous people.

The addition of the civic improvement idea to the social service was a surprise to most people. The organization has always been for the purposes of charity. It is believed that there is room for such a movement. The constitution says one of the objects is: "To promote such forms of civic improvement as may be deemed wise."

All persons interested may become members, and the following are ex-officio members: judge of the circuit court, judge of the juvenile court, the prosecuting attorney, the mayor of Rushville, superintendent of the city schools, the Rushville township trustee, church pastors, the board of childrens guardians, the county board of charities, the county truant officer and the secretary of the city board of health.

The management of the association will be vested in an executive committee of seven, no more than four of whom shall be of the same sex. At the first meeting after the annual election the executive committee will elect its officers—president, vice-president, secretary and treasurer—who shall serve for a year, and also as officers of the association. The executive committee is given power to fill vacancies in the committee, in any office, and to create and fill new offices.

The advisory committee will consist of five representative business men who will be consulted in regard to raising funds and as to the general policy of the association. At the organization one member will be elected for one year, one for two years and two for three years, each member to be elected for three years thereafter.

National Reform Association At-

The National Reform Association, of which the Rev. A. W. Jamieson, pastor of the United Presbyterian church of this city, is State president, is attempting to get a foothold in Indiana. The Rev. The association was formed in 1864 as a protest against national unrighteousness.

The annual meeting will be held the first Monday in October each year, the place to be designated by the president. Other meetings will be held as called by the president. Not less than a month before the annual meeting a nominating committee of three: one member of the executive committee, one member of the advisory committee and one who is not a member of either, shall fill all vacancies in both committees and present their nominations at the annual meeting.

The executive committee will appoint the following standing committees: friendly, visiting, employment, housing, child welfare, health, civic interests, home improvement, saving and thrift and poor relief.

Amendments should be presented in writing, and if approved by the advisory and executive committees, may be adopted at any regular meeting.

MOST PARCELS SENT BY THE CITY PEOPLE

Of 260 Pieces Mailed by Parcel Post

First Six Day, 220 Taken to Postoffice.

POSTMASTER MAKES REPORT

The report of Postmaster Charles Frazee on the parcel post business in the Rushville postoffice during the first six days it has been in effect, ending last night, reveals that 534 parcels with a combined weight of 451 pounds were handled. The parcels average less than a pound apiece in weight. The total postage paid was $19.54.

The number of parcels delivered was 14 in excess of those collected from the local office. The collections numbered 260 and the deliveries 274. The weight of the parcels collected at the postoffice and on the rural routes was 210 pounds and that of the ones delivered on city and rural routes was 241.

By far the greater number of parcels were mailed by city people. Of the 260 pieces collected only forty of them came in off the rural routes.

WILL EGGS THAT MAY BE CHICKS BE MAIL?

Novel Question is Raised in Regard to Provisions of Parcel Post
Since it Started.

PUZZLE FOR POSTAL OFFICIAL

A novel question has been raised in regard to the new parcel post service and if it ever comes to the test it promises to be as hard to answer as the questions involved in "Pigs is Pigs." The parcel post law permits the shipment of eggs through the mail. It also permits the shipment of dead chickens. However, the law absolutely forbids the shipment of anything alive. The question raised is this: If eggs shipped through the mail should happen to hatch what would be done with the young chickens? Under the law live chickens could not be handled by the postal authorities and at the same time it would be unlawful for them to break open private mail and rifle it. If the chickens died they would again return to a mailable class of matter, but if they continued to live the postal officials would undoubtedly be in a quandary.

Two Bond Ordinances For Sidewalk
Improvements Passed—To Buy
More Water Meters.

The council held its first regular session of the new year last night. Most of the time was taken up with reports on the year 1912. All members were present, including Arnold Orme, the newly elected councilman-at-large.

Councilman Kelley, of the water and light committee, suggested that the council take advantage of an offer and buy water meters in lots of one hundred. The demand for meters has increased and the city, to supply the demand will be compelled to purchase a large number. By taking the meters in 100 lots the city gets a price of $10.40 per meter and pays for them as they are installed. The price for a single meter is $12.60. The question was left over until the next meeting in order to investigate the offer.

A few weeks ago Thomas Geraghty, Sr., was given the contract for the city's part of the excavating to be done at Ninth and Maple streets. The understanding was that the owners were to pay Mr. Geraghty for their share of the work. Mr. Geraghty appeared before the council last night and wanted to break the contract because the property owners now refuse to pay their part. The council instructed Mr. Geraghty to do the city's part of the work and let the property owners go.

Mayor Black reported that he had paid $76 to the city treasurer for docket fees for the quarter ending January 1, and $26 in fines to the county treasurer. The report was ordered placed on file. John Kelley, street commissioner, reported the sale of dirt and gravel to the amount of $116.50 during 1912.

Two bond ordinances, one for $241.70 for the improvement of Fourth street and the other, $104.24 for Hannah street, were passed.

The clerk and treasurer's financial report for the year 1912 was submitted to the council as follows:

GALE CLAIMS TOLL OF LIFE ON DEADLY REEF

Thirty - Three of Tank Ship's Crew Perish.

Astoria, Ore., Jan. 8.—While crossing into the Columbia river during a gale, the oil tank steamship Rosecrans, Captain L. F. Johnson, from Monterey, Cal., for Portland, Ore., ran aground on Peacock Spit and later sank with thirty-three members of her crew of thirty-seven.

One survivor of the wreck was reported to have reached shore six miles from the scene of the disaster, and the Point Adams life-saving crew rescued three other men.

The latter had taken refuge in the rigging of one of the masts when the ship went down. For many hours they clung there, the waves breaking over them repeatedly. Not until the wind died down somewhat were the life savers able to reach them. Owing to the thick weather the plight of the Rosecrans was not learned for several hours.

Despondent Dunkard Takes His Life.
Camden, Ind., Jan. 8.—Levi Cripe, fifty-five years old, a prominent conservative Dunkard, hanged himself from a rafter of his barn at his home here. Telling his wife that he would do the milking, he left the house and on his failure to return Mrs. Cripe went to call him, finding his body hanging to a rope in the haymow. He had been despondent and morose for several days.

Have You Got Yours?
Washington, Jan. 8.—The latest estimate of the population of continental United States places the figure at 96,496,000 on Jan. 2. This figure was used by the treasury department experts in determining that of the total money in circulation in the country on that date $3,350,727,580, the amount per capita was $34.72.

It Made Wong Shiver.
Chicago, Jan. 8.—The penalty for smoking opium in China now is death for men under forty years of age," said Municipal Judge Hopkins to Wong Sing, a Chinese arrested for opium smoking. Wong Sing paled and trembled violently, but was much relieved when the judge fined him $5.

STATE SENATE NOW IS READY

Caucus Determined Upon Organization.

HOUSE WILL CAUCUS TONIGHT

The Preparatory Meeting of Majority Members of the Upper House of the Indiana Legislature Effected a State of Senate Officers Which Will Be Ratified Upon the Assembling of That Body Tomorrow.

Indianapolis, Jan. 8.—George William Curtis of Mt. Vernon was elected president pro tem. of the upper house for the coming session at the caucus of the Democratic senators held at the Denison hotel last night, and Warren N. Hauck of Lawrenceburg was named caucus chairman.

Harry E. Grube of Plymouth was named caucus secretary and Wade H. Free of Anderson was elected secretary to the senate without opposition. The election of George M. Raab of Mishawaka to the assistant secretaryship of the senate was the surprise of the caucus. He was selected from a field of six aspirants for the place. Before the vote had been finished it was moved that his selection be made unanimous. Mr. Raab has Lieutenant Governor Elect W. P. O'Neill of Mishawaka to thank for his election. He was not placed in the field until yesterday, and his "dark horse" race was the discussion about the Denison lobbies for hours last night.

The caucus is to be continued at 4 o'clock this afternoon at the Denison, at which time a new plunder committee appointed at the meeting last night, will bring in its report on the minor positions in the upper house. The new committee is the old plunder committee, including Senators Harlan, Yarling and Nettoville, supplemented by the addition of President Pro Tem Curtis and Lieutenant Governor Elect O'Neill. At the caucus last night the original plunder committee brought in its report, which allowed each senator one sixty-day appointee or as many appointees whose terms totalled sixty-one days, as he desires. Suggestions for such appointments were made last night to the new plunder committee, and the report will be given out this afternoon.

John D. Shea of Indianapolis was elected chief doorkeeper of the senate over John Kelly of Rushville, the doorkeeper two years ago, by a vote of 20½ to 17½.

William P. O'Neill, the incoming lieutenant governor, will name the senate committees. That fact has been definitely established, according to reliable information. Wade H. Free, newly elected secretary to the senate, will nominally appoint several officials, including the reading clerk, roll clerk, chief engrossing clerk, and several others. Mr. Free, however, will take recommendations from the senators before deciding upon his appointments. Senator Frank Greenwell of Hometown was the only senator on the Democratic side of the upper house who did not attend the meeting last night, and he is on hand today. Stephen H. Fleming of Fort Wayne asked the other senators to concur in the appointment of B. F. Johnson of Fort Wayne as postmaster of the upper house, and then "ducked out" of the caucus. It was settled that Mr. Johnson would get the job.

The majority members of the house will hold their caucus tonight. There is no apparent change in the probable outcome heretofore forecasted in these columns. The Republican senators probably will hold a caucus tonight. Senator Oscar Ratts of Paoli and Senator Will R. Wood of Lafayette each said that no official call had been sent out to the eight members of the Republican corps in the upper house, but that in all probability the caucus would be held. Some definite program of action will be outlined at the meeting, and Senator Wood is responsible for the statement that the nine Republicans in the upper house will propose and fight legislation just as sincerely as if they were not so hopelessly in the minority. John N. Gavit of Whiting, the Bull Moose member of the upper house, probably will hold his "personal caucus" some time today.

Two Fools and a Gun.
Harrodsburg, Ky., Jan. 8.—Jack Coleman, a local William Tell, bet Henry Marshall that he could put a rifle bullet through Marshall's hat without touching his scalp. Marshall accepted the wager and won it. The bullet went through the hat and Marshall's skull, killing him instantly. Coleman was arrested.

War Prisoners Offer Tribute.
Indianapolis, Jan. 8.—A bronze bust of Colonel Richard Dale Owen will be unveiled at the statehouse Saturday by Governor Marshall. Colonel Owen was commandant of Camp Morton during the civil war, and the bronze bust is the gift of Confederate prisoners who were prisoners of war under Colonel Owen.

Cider Declared Contraband.
Evansville, Ind., Jan. 8.—Deputy federal marshals seized 100 barrels of apple cider consigned from Quincy, Ill., to this city, because it is alleged it contains benzoate of soda, while the labels call it pure. The cider will be held for payment of penalties.

QUINCY A. MYERS

Now Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Indiana.

Indianapolis, Jan. 8.—The term of Chief Justice Leander J. Monks of the supreme court of Indiana having expired, his successor, Richard K. Irwin of Fort Wayne, has taken office. The chief justiceship, by rotation, goes to Judge Quincy A. Myers of Logansport, the only remaining Republican on the state's highest bench.

POLAR EXPLORERS IN THE DIREST STRAITS

Majority of Expedition Dead of Starvation.

Berlin, Jan. 8.—The preliminary expedition, which is now at Spitzbergen, is short of food, the committee of the projected German Arctic expedition which is to explore the northeast passage, has just learned. The committee is preparing to send a supply.

It is reported that a majority of the members of the expedition have died of starvation. A dispatch from Christiania says that Ritschel, a member of the expedition, reached Adventure bay on Dec. 21, half dead from cold and hunger. He said the survivors were on the north coast of Spitzbergen and were only provided with supplies for a month. He and others had been sent to seek help. The others were unable to get further than Widjo bay.

This is the first news of this expedition since the end of last August, when the Hamburg-American steamship Victoria Louise, while on a pleasure cruise, sighted the expedition.

Function of the Eyebrows.

The eyebrows protect the eye from external violence. The hairs, on account of their oblique direction, prevent the perspiration from flowing toward or irritating the surface of that organ; they direct it toward the temple and the root of the nose. The color and number of hairs of the eyebrow have an influence upon their use. They generally have some relation to the climate. The eyebrows protect the eye from excess of light, particularly when it comes from above. This effect is made more conspicuous by knitting of the brows.

TROOPS FIRE ON COMRADES

Terrible Mistake Made by Mexican Soldiers Near Toluca.

Toluca, Mexico, Jan. 8.—Twenty federal soldiers were killed owing to a clash by mistake between two bodies of government troops who had been brought to Toluca as a sequel to an attack by fifty followers of Zapata on a passenger train fifteen miles south of this city.

A detachment of light cavalry had been sent to protect the passengers of the wrecked train and to escort them here. As they were marching they were observed by another body of federal troops approaching the same spot, and these opened fire. Before the commanders of the two forces had recognized that they were fighting comrades twenty men were dead.

CENTENARIES OF SEVERAL BIG EVENTS FALL IN PRESENT YEAR

World Was Convulsed by Wars One Hundred Years Ago.

Napoleon Was Overthrown; Locomotive Invented; Perry's Victory.

By JAMES A. EDGERTON.

CENTENARIES will not be so numerous during 1913 as in some recent years, about the only celebration in America being that of the battle of Lake Erie. Yet on both sides of the Atlantic 1813 saw important events. The downfall of Napoleon and the invention of the locomotive made rather big dents in this old world. It is true that the little emperor was not banished to Elba till the following year, but the alliance against him that doomed his ascendancy was consummated in 1813. It is also true that George Stephenson did not complete his first traveling engine until 1814, but he was at work on it the year previous, so that 1813 should have a share of the glory.

Superstitious people—and who among us is entirely free?—are not a little nervous about a year ending in the hoodoo burdened 13. Some one has gone to the trouble to point out not only the downfall of Napoleon in 1813, but the eclipse of the Grand Monarch, Louis XIV., in 1713 and other disasters that happened in 1613, 1513, etc. All of this is respectfully referred to the various ancient history societies and the thirteen clubs. Meanwhile the rest of us can get all the apprehensive shivers out of the date that our systems require. There is nothing unconstitutional in being superstitious, even though most of our troubles never occur.

In 1813 the population of the United States, as determined at the previous census of 1810, was 7,239,881. Eighteen states composed the Union, the original thirteen and the following subsequently admitted: Vermont, which came in during 1791; Kentucky, admitted in 1792; Tennessee, 1796; Ohio, 1803, and Louisiana, carved out of the then new Louisiana purchase, in 1812. Nearly everything west of the Allegheny mountains was raw frontier. Washington was a straggling and muddy country village and New York a city of about 100,000 population.

Not a Millionaire in the Land.

Somebody has said that transportation in the days of William Pitt was but little advanced from the time of Julius Caesar. Outside of the steamboat, the same statement would apply to 1813. Even the steamboat had not yet come into general use, the bulk of ocean vessels still carrying sail. The steam engine in any form was in its infancy. Lights commonly in use were the candle, tallow dip and pine knot. The stagecoach went lumbering over muddy and ill kept roads, the Indian was a menace in most of the land, education was confined to the few, and there was not a millionaire in the republic.

Conditions in Europe were but little better. War was still the chief occupation of men who amounted to anything, and at this very time the greatest warrior since Caesar had gone through the devastating retreat from Russia and was being hedged about by his numerous foes and driven into a corner.

For a decade Napoleon had practically been Europe. He made its map to suit his whim. The kings ate out of his hand. He strode through the nations like an overlord, accompanied by the thunders of war and the lightnings of victory. He preached the gospel of the French revolution in tones so loud that they have not yet ceased to reverberate. He was the man of iron that broke the nations to pieces and reaveled the bits into his own personal empire. He was both a scourge and an evangel, a destroyer and a builder, a mighty warrior and a great executive. In all hearts he aroused extreme passions. Men either idolatrously loved or feared and hated him. Napoleon was one of those prodigious figures that will shine through thousands of years and will be an enigma to all of them.

Beaten by Nonresistance.

Russia conquered Napoleon without fighting him. True she did meet him at bloody Borodino, but it was not Borodino that gave him the fatal check from which he never recovered. He was a victor in the battle, but could not overcome the frost and starvation that encompassed his legions. Russia defeated this greatest of soldiers by nonresistance. The retreat from Moscow broke not only his own grand army, but the spell he held over Europe. After all, he was but mortal. The lion had fallen into the pit, and before he could emerge his enemies were on him in a pack.

The retreat occurred in the early winter and Ney brought the remnants of the grand army across the Nienfen in December. The emperor had hurried on before and was already back in Paris raising another army. He was still to win a few victories, but lacked the old swiftness and decision. The recruits had to be drilled and this used up precious time. The workman who fears the tool in his hand does not strike his hardest or surest blow. Especially is this true if his work is the carving of empires.

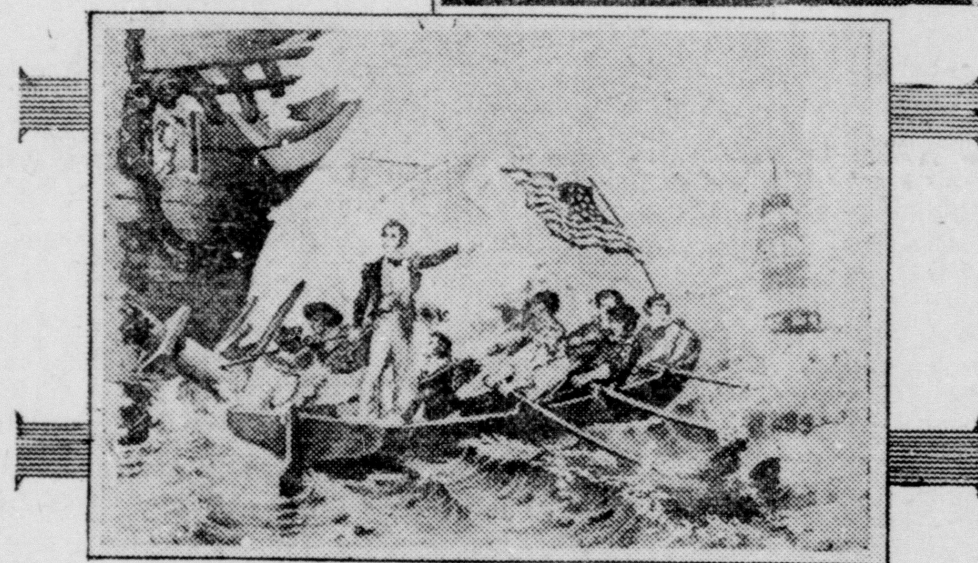

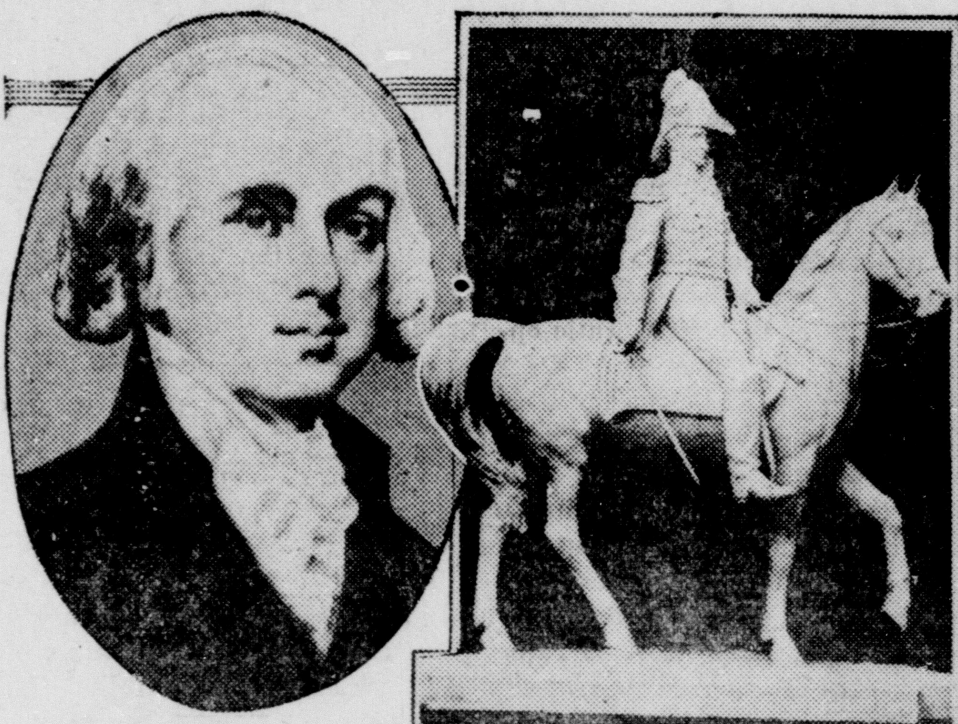

Heartened by the news from Russia, Prussia made an alliance with the czar, in August Austria followed suit. This made the formidable alliance against Napoleon consist of England, Russia, Prussia, Austria and Sweden.

In the spring the emperor had his new armies in the field and in May won the battles of Lutzen and Bautzen. The great fight at Dresden occurred in August. This was practically the last of his victories. In defiance of the hosts gathered against him he held on when retreat would have been wise generalship. Possibly he did not know of Blucher's fateful movement about his flank. It was October before the allies were ready to strike, and then "the battle of the nations" at Leipzig sent the French army reeling in defeat, broke Napoleon's grasp on Europe and a few months later sent him to Elba, still emperor in name, but shorn of power.

The War of 1812.

While this war of the giants was shaking Europe we were having our own little fight at home. In fact, if not in name, Napoleon was our powerful ally, for it was because England's hands were full at home that we were able to win the war of 1812. Even so, we suffered some defeats on land, although our sea victories more than balanced these. The year began badly for the Americans, our forces having taken Frenchtown, Canada, on Jan. 18, but being surrounded and captured by the British four days later. Another American army in April captured York, now Toronto, but an effort to take Montreal met with no success.

At sea the year told another story. Despite the fact that Britain then, as now, was mistress of the seas, our little wooden vessels drove the mistress out of her own watery dooryard. Two English ships, the Resolution and the Peacock, were stung by the American Hornet during the month of February and both captured. These were gallant actions, and we can imagine our great-granddaddies celebrating the double victory with as much of the hard cider and applejack as would be left in the cellar in February. Along in June came another tale of glory when the Chesapeake captured the Shannon, and in September occurred one more flag waving day when our Enterprise brought the British Boxer into port.

Perry's Victory.

September, 1813, was a big month for the Americans. The rejoicing over the Enterprise-Boxer affair was but a faint prelude to the chorus of jubilation heard all over Yankeeedom when Perry's laconic message came down from Lake Erie: "We have met the enemy, and they are ours—two ships, two brigs, one schooner and one sloop." Oliver Hazard Perry never posed as a phrasemaker or a juggler of the queen's English, yet in that dispatch he gave us a sentence that will be repeated as long as there are Fourth of July orators and school histories.

Into the battle that has raged over the respective merits of Commodore Perry and Commandant Elliott and over the comparative strength of the American and British ships engaged there is no use of entering at this late day. Perhaps the Americans had the larger force. If so it was more than balanced by the fact that the British engaged were veterans who had fought with Nelson, while our vessels were hastily constructed and were manned by men for the most part untried in war. Neither is it necessary to pass the bromide bottle by describing the battle of Lake Erie. In this action Perry's feat of leaving his own disabled ship and going in an open boat to another was quite as dramatic as his message to General Harrison telling of the result, already quoted. All of which convinces us that the commodore was not only a handy man in a fight, but had histrionic ability on the side. Note that word histrionic. It has been used before, but is perfectly good.

The Lake Erie Centenary.

As already suggested, we are to have a centenary of this Lake Erie affair. We believe one of the boats is to be raised for the occasion; also that a monument to Perry is to be dedicated or unveiled, or something. The details will come along in the newspapers in due course. Suffice it to say that there will be a celebration, with the inevitable oratory and doings. Erie, Pa., the former Put-in-Bay, where Perry constructed his fleet and from whence it sailed forth to glory, will be decidedly on the map.

The battle of Lake Erie smashed the British power in the west, and the job was completed in October by General William Henry Harrison at the battle of the Thames. This was perhaps the greatest land victory won by the American forces, second only to that gained by another future president, General Andrew Jackson, at New Orleans.

On March 4, 1813, President James Madison was inaugurated for a second term. It is worthy of note that on March 4 next, exactly 100 years later, another Princeton man, Woodrow Wilson, will go through the same ceremony. These two are the only Princeton men who have ever starred in this particular role. The 1813 inaugural was not a particularly imposing affair, although brilliant socially, the immortal Dolly being then in her element. As the president was a studious man, most of these social duties devolved on Mrs. Dolly, and it is unanimously agreed that she was equal to the part.

A Noted Cabinet.

Elbridge Gerry came in at the same time as vice president. The only other thing remembered of Mr. Gerry is the gerrymander. James Monroe was secretary of state and for a time also secretary of war. Colonel Monroe was as active as Mr. Madison was studious and for a time was nearly the whole administration, so far as conducting the war was concerned. Albert Gallatin was secretary of the treasury, perhaps the most famous of its secretaries, second to Alexander Hamilton. These were about the only members of the Madison cabinet who are remembered to the present day. The others were perfectly respectable men, as cabinet members usually are, but it takes a rather sizable figure to be seen from a distance of 100 years.

As to the invention of the locomotive, two or three men were working at the problem during this very year 1813. One of them finished his model, but it did not work well, and he began another. George Stephenson was an engineer at the Killingworth colliery and proposed to build a locomotive to haul the cars over a tramroad to the port, nine miles distant. His first traveling engine was completed in 1814, as before noted, and from this he went on to perfecting the locomotive. Some of those early engines were curious affairs with cogs and upright pistons. Anyway, they filled the pragmatic requirement. They worked.

The year that saw the double blessing of the fall of Napoleon and the rise of the railroad is worthy of a place in history.

Col. Goethals.

Democratic senators at Washington have succeeded in making it plain that the appointment of Col. Goethals as governor general of the Panama Canal zone could not be confirmed. In all probability, on a square voting test in the Senate, they would be unable to muster a majority against confirmation. Public opinion would likely force confirmation in the event of such a ballot. But under the rules of the Senate and the courtesy of the Senate, it is evident that Democratic opposition to confirmation could defer action until after the 4th of March, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. Very properly Col. Goethals announces that, having never made an effort to secure the appointment from the president, he will do nothing to influence senatorial action or become party to any effort to force action in that body. And very wisely the president says that, if there is to be partisan opposition, or opposition of any kind, to the confirmation of Col. Goethals, his name will not be sent in.

Both the president and Col. Goethals must have assumed, as practically all intelligent people have, that a man with such a record of national achievement as the builder of the canal at Panama has made for himself would not be subjected to the party tests which may more properly be drawn against others of less commanding merits. Col. Goethals' achievement is public and not party achievement. It is a national and not a sectional work he has done. He was out of the country, engaged in that work, during all of the campaign which lately closed. He was on the isthmus engaged in the same work during the presidential campaign of four years ago. In fact, it would not be easy to find even in the army a man with better claim to immunity from a charge of mere spoilsism, or one against whom a party line could be drawn with less of warrant or excuse.

The attitude of the Senate Democrats is probably a part of their policy of holding up all Taft appointments to office made between the dates of the election and the inauguration. But it is not a consistent part of that policy. It may be admitted as to other men appointed to other offices by Mr. Taft since his defeat for reelection, in recognition of personal, or party, or even ordinary public service, that the Democrats are not without just ground of opposition. Republicans are not disposed to go so far in denial of the claim that the spoils should belong to the victors as to defend long-term appointments to lucrative place made by a retiring president before he passes out. But the appointment of Col. Goethals, which the president had decided upon, was so free of all offensiveness, and so far removed from all taint of spoilsism, that the president was justified in thinking that the Democrats would not draw against him the line they are drawing against others.

The Indianapolis Star, possibly with a little feeling of remorse, publishes the following: (Editorial note: please place the emphasis on the word commendable.)

"It is a pity that President Taft's commendable idea of showing appreciation of Col. Goethals' magnificent engineering work on the canal by making him the first civil governor of the canal zone should be interfered with by petty ambitions of men not qualified for the office. Partisan politics should not figure in the matter of rewarding Goethals. His work has brought glory to the country, not to a party."

A riot was barely averted in Wall Street yesterday when somebody quoted the Golden Rule.

Muncie Press: Of course it is to be remembered that when Colonel Roosevelt speaks with righteous indignation of a court decision that denies a citizen the right to cast a vote for the presidential candidate of his choice, he refers to Idaho not to California. In California where Governor Johnson and the Supreme court of California seized the Republican name and emblem for the Bull Moose candidate for president, disfranchising Republicans, the Colonel's indignation is necessarily directed at the malefactors who protested.

What Our Neighbors Are Talking About

Belated Justice.

(Fort Wayne News.)

In connection with the acceptance by President Taft of a professorship at Yale the Indianapolis Star remarks:

"President Taft's love is for the law. He will doubtless enjoy the duties of the professorship he has accepted and the leaders on international and constitutional law that he will deliver and will fill the position with honor and credit to himself and the university. It is a dignified position and should he remain there indefinitely the country may properly enough find satisfaction in the fact that its former president is filling an important educational office worthily and with pleasure to himself."

Well! Well! Well! And this from the Indianapolis Star that not two months ago, echoing the virulent strictures of Colonel Roosevelt to the effect that President Taft was a "poreh climber," a "fool," a "puzzle wit" and a "crook no better than a thief." Yet now we are told in all seriousness that this bad man will fill a position of high responsibility in one of the country's greatest educational institutions "with honor and credit."

Just what does the Star mean anyhow? Does it wish us to understand that the little quips it passes out during the stress of a political campaign are uttered merely in a Pickwickian sense? It certainly has that appearance.

Authorities on Agriculture Will Speak at Purdue Short Course Next Week.

SOIL CONSERVATION THEME

Corn Show Will be Instructive Feature of Annual Event—Premium List Distributed.

Purdue University will be honored not only by the presence of many hundreds of Indiana farmers and their wives during the week of the short course, January 13-18, but by some of the most noted agriculture workers of the United States. Among these will be Dr. Cyril G. Hopkins of Illinois, a man who has done more than any other to solve the great problem of soil fertility.

Dr. Hopkins believes that farmers should adopt a system of farming that will look toward a permanent agriculture. He has no sympathy with the treatments that give results for one or two years. How to grow successful, profitable crops and at the same time conserve the strength of the soil so that twenty-five years from now the land will be just as fertile and the crops as great as they are today, will be the theme for discussion. Indiana Farmers should arrange to hear Dr. Hopkins at the annual meeting of the Corn Growers Association, Jan. 15, 1913.

Prof. Kern of Illinois will also give an illustrated address on "Improvement of School, Home and Country Life." Indiana people are interested in this movement and a large attendance is assured.

The Corn Show is also attracting much attention. The premium list has been distributed and farmers are now busy shaping and grooming samples for this contest. The prize winning exhibits at the State show will be sent to the National Corn Exposition at Columbia, South Carolina. The assertions are ventured that the winning samples at the National Corn Exposition will be exhibited in the Indiana State Show. See the Indiana State Corn at the State show and note the degree of perfection attained by some of the best corn growers in the world.

It's Funny

How minds will differ. It would be absolutely impractical to pave the city with gold bricks, is the statement a friend of mine made to me and he gave this reason:

Hoboes from all over the country would come here and extract them as they needed them and it would keep our streets torn up almost all the time.

What method do you think could be devised to remedy this condition?

I am open for suggestions.

"How much," asked Mike, "will you give me?"

"Us," corrected James.

"How much do you want?"

"How much will you give?"

"Ten dollars."

"For a suit of clothes?" Mike's fat red face depicted his horror.

"Twenty," cried the stranger.

"Apiece?" asked James.

"Apiece," declared the unhappy youth.

"Apiece, James," said Mike, turning inquiringly to his companion.

"Make it thirty," said James, "and we may be able to help you."

"All right, thirty apiece. Get me the clothes."

"You might write us each a check," suggested James, and drew forth the pen and check-book.

"For innocence," groaned Mike, "commend me to me loving comrade, James."

The stranger's eyes glittered as he recognized his book and pen. He glanced from one ragged specimen before him to the other, from James' crafty face to Mike's soft visage, but he said nothing, merely took the pen and book.

"Your names?" he asked, opening the book and resting it against a tree for support.

"Better put to bearer," said James. "Simplicity is always the best."

The stranger wrote the checks, signed them and turned to the two watching him. "Bring me the suit," he said quietly, "and these are yours."

Mike shuffled off into the trees and James and the stranger waited in silence for his return. He came back presently and threw the suit at the stranger's feet.

"You'll notice," said he, "that this nobby spring suit in our latest style is cheap at the price. Fancy, a thing like that for only sixty dollars!"

"I see," said the stranger.

"Payable in advance," said James. The stranger handed them each a check and thoughtfully drew on the shabby clothes of the Watermelon. It had not been long since he had worn rags of a necessity, and he hitched them up with the skill bred of familiarity. He thrust the pen and book into a pocket he had first made sure was holeless. Then he turned to the two and his eyes gleamed.

"How much for the car?" he asked. Mike raised his hands to heaven.

"The car? James, does he think we stole his car?"

"A stock broker," said James, "would suspect his own mother."

"If you want your car," said Mike, "go to the hotel."

"Bah," snapped the stranger. "Do you think I was weaned yesterday? Be quick and tell me your price."

"I have no price," said Mike proudly, not sure where the car was.

They started through the woods to the village, the stranger leading and Mike and James following. At the edge of the village, they paused instinctively and without a word.

"Tell me where the car is and who your accomplice is," said the stranger in the short sharp tones of one born to command, "and you two can go free. If you don't tell, I'll do my best to have you arrested and sent up for grand larceny. Understand?"

"Oh, yes," said Mike, "I understand. When I was young I learned English, foolishly, as I haven't used it since."

"We don't know where your damn car is," declared James. "And we didn't steal your blooming outfit. What do you take us for, anyway?"

"Very well, then," snapped the stranger. "I see that you won't tell. Remember, I gave you your chance."

He turned and hurried down the village street. The two watched him as he stopped a pedestrian and apparently asked to be directed to the justice of the peace, then they slipped away in the woods and quietly, simultaneously, turned north, falling into a gentle lope that took them far with the minimum of effort.

"I hope the kid ain't plinched," said James, after a while.

Mike sighed and shook his head. "Grand larceny," he murmured. "That's gratitude for you."

CHAPTER IX.

On the Road.

The general never went anywhere without a well-stocked library, guide-books, instruction books, maps. All were consulted long and often, and with a childlike faith that Henrietta's sarcasm and the sign-posts had not been able to shake.

Bartlett knew of this unfortunate tendency of the general's and resolved to get rid of those books and maps and papers. With every mile indicated and nicely tabulated, every turn and landmark mentioned, it would be almost impossible to get off the beaten route, and they must avoid telegraph stations and post offices as much as possible. The success of the scheme lay in keeping Batchelor away from all touch and communication with the city. They must, if possible, get lost, and with the multitudinous books and maps they would not be able to. Therefore, they must get rid of the books and maps.

SERIOUS ERROR IN RUSHVILLE

Rushville Citizens Will Do Well to Profit by the Following.

Many fatal cases of kidney disease have reached an incurable stage because the patient did not understand the symptoms. Even today in Rushville, there are many residents making the same error. They attribute their mysterious aches and pains to overwork, or worry, perhaps, when all the time their rheumatic pains, backache and bladder irregularities are most probably due to weak and ailing kidneys. If you are ill, if your kidneys are out of order, profit by this Rushville resident's experience.

Mrs. William Merrill, 332 W. 4th St., Rushville, Ind., says: "I suffered for quite a while from weakness in my back. I had a dull pain over my kidneys, often accompanied by headaches. The simplest of my household duties was a burden. I finally got Doan's Kidney Pills at Johnson's Drug Store and used them. They proved their merits by entirely relieving me."

ing in the doorway. Bartlett collected all the literature from the general's car and hastened back to the hotel. Surreptitiously, he entered an empty room near the one assigned to him and when he emerged again, his arms were burdenless and he was smiling gently.

They waited for the Watermelon on the porch, intending to have an early supper and start while it was still light. Bartlett greeted the returning youth with relief and led the way to the dining-room. He mentioned a small village some thirty miles to the north, where they could find accommodations for the night in an old farmhouse.

"Friends of mine," said he, "I go there every fall."

The general rose to get his blue book. "We will look it up," said he. Bartlett stopped him. The town was not in the book. He knew, for he had tried to find it.

"The maps will do," said the general, who liked to locate every town visually on the maps or in the books before he undertook to motor there.

Desperate, Bartlett declared that it was not on the maps. But the general would not be daunted. They could put it on the maps themselves if they knew in which county it was, near what post office—

"We don't want to locate it," said Bartlett, growing stern and cross of a necessity.

They found the cars waiting at the steps and a small crowd to see them off and wile away the time before supper.

Bartlett said, as he knew the way, he would lead. "We need only two cars. Mr. Batchelor's can be left until we return."

"Three cars might come in handy," protested the general, who objected to every suggestion not his own, on principle.

A Singular Occurrence

By WILLARD BLAKEMAN

Mrs. Elliot Walker came home at 5 o'clock in the afternoon and saw her husband, who had arrived before her, just going into the library. He seemed agitated.

"What's the matter, dear?" she asked. "Nothing."

This was all that passed between them at the time. Mrs. Walker went upstairs, and just as she reached the upper landing she saw a woman's hat sinking below the top step of the rear staircase. Mrs. Walker ran after her, saw her turn toward the front of the house and into the library. The lady ran into the room and saw a well dressed, rather good looking woman standing near her husband.

"Well, I declare!" exclaimed the astonished wife.

"Well?" said the husband, looking from one woman to the other.

Mrs. Walker was too full for utterance. The stranger cast her eyes on the floor. When the former found her voice she cast a troubled glance at her husband and said in a trembling voice: "Oh, Elliot, to think that I should have been so deceived in you."

"I know no more of this woman than you do," was the reply. "If you doubt me ask her."

The wife turned to the stranger, but spoke no word. Why should she? The woman acknowledged her guilt by her appearance. Her head was bowed; her eyes were glued to the floor.

"For one thing," said Mrs. Walker, "I give her credit. She can't lie as you can."

"My dear"—Mr. Walker regarded his wife with an injured look; then, turning a severe glance upon the woman, he asked:

"What do you mean by this behavior?"

"Elliot," she said without raising her head, "I am lost. My husband must sooner or later know of this, and I shall be an outcast from my home."

"Elliot! You call me by my first name—you, whom I have never seen before—and you admit that you came here to meet me in my wife's absence when I have only been at home a few minutes. This is incomprehensible."

"Oh, heavens!" exclaimed the wife. "It is plain enough to me. Elliot, I know your unconquerable assurance. Were this woman as adept in playing a part as you, your game would have worked admirably. As it is you are caught. Would that I could be deceived; then I would not suffer!"

"My dear!"

"Never call me that again! Madam, leave this house at once!"

The intruder, still with bowed head, passed slowly from the room into the hall. The front door closed behind her, and husband and wife were left alone together.

"This is the most remarkable occurrence of my life," said Mr. Walker. "And the most crushing in mine," added the wife.

"I give you my word of honor that I never saw that woman before."

"Do you take me for a fool? Did not the creature admit what you deny?" For this the husband had no reply.

"Leave me," he said, "to regain my equanimity. I am in no condition to think. There must be an explanation if I can but hit upon it. I came home only a few minutes before your arrival, much worried about a matter of business. I have a note coming due tomorrow and no funds with which to meet it. On top of that trouble comes this one."

The wife silently left the room. What was there to be said? The proof against her husband was absolute. His business trouble was an additional misfortune for her as well as for him. Going into another room, she threw herself on a sofa and gave way to immoderate grief, while her husband was walking the floor in the library. After awhile she arose, dried her eyes and went back to the library.

"What is the amount of this note?" she asked.

"Six thousand dollars."

"Though you have ceased to be what you have been to me, you are still my legal husband and I am still peculiarly interested in your affairs. My jewels will bring more than $6,000. I will go and get them for you."

She went out of the room without having given him a look. Going up to her bedroom, she opened a drawer in which she kept a few ornaments she used from day to day, intending also to remove the bulk of her jewels from a safe. Those in the drawer were gone.

A sudden idea flashed through her brain. She flew like a swallow down the stairs, ran into the library and threw her arms about her husband's neck.

"Elliot, forgive me!"

"What the dickens?"

"Oh, the blessed relief! How happy I am!"

"Explain, for heaven's sake."

"The jewels are gone."

"The jewels! Gone?"

"Yes; the woman must have taken them. When caught she invented a plan to get away instead of being taken with the jewels on her."

"Well, I'll be hanged! Have you lost all your jewels?"

"No; only a few I kept out of the safe."

"Heaven be praised!"

"My dear," said Mr. Walker, suddenly resuming confidence, "let this be a warning to you. Trust me always."

The thief was never caught, but the note was paid at maturity.

JAMES R. KEENE'S PICTURESQUE LIFE

Droll Anecdotes Are Told of Dead Financier.

HE HAD WONDERFUL GENIUS

Mr. Keene's Prodigious Winnings on Stock Exchange and Race Track Established Records—He Used Foresight and Generalship That Bewildered Competitors.

James Robert Keene, who died recently, was a highly vitalized combination of marvelous powers and contradictory traits. A master speculator, one of the greatest tacticians which Wall street ever knew, adamant when roused to resistance and implacable as a foe, he also had hidden strains of simplicity and benevolence. The financial world knew him as the daring operator, some called him Robin Hood, and men who reared great fortunes made use of him as they would an instrument of precision such confidence did they have in his powers of analysis and his ability to carry out what he had decided to do.

It was the turf which found his heart. As a child he loved horses; as a man he idolized them. His greatest joy in life was in rearing victors for his colors and in advancing the interest of the American sport of racing. His sardonic humor dropped from him as a mask when he breathed the air of the track.

Had Record Winnings.

From 1898 to 1908 the remarkable turf winnings of Mr. Keene (during which time his horses were trained by James Rowe) exceeded $2,000,000, and no other stable in the world has that record.

At least a million dollars of the large sum won in the period above named was earned by horses whose immediate sires or dams were by Domino, and it was the purchase of this renowned racer as a yearling in 1892 for $3,000 which laid the foundation of his enormous successes.

Paid Big Price For Information.

"I can lay bare the one sole reason for my triumph with a word. The world is my spy. I pay the highest price for information."

Some years ago one of his friends asked James R. Keene to what he attributed his great success in life, and the financier replied in the words quoted above. Certainly none of his friends and associates ever accused Mr. Keene of not knowing every detail of anything in which he was interested. To them he always seemed to know everything that any one else knew and more besides.

The story of the last thirty years of his life is the story of most of the sensational deals put through in Wall street during that period and of the triumphs of famous race horses on the turf before the "sport of kings" was killed by the Hughes anti-racing law. Outside of his business Mr. Keene had but one hobby—horse racing—and he indulged in that to the limit. Domino, Peter Pan, Colin, Sysonby, Commando, Ballot, Celt, Sweep and a dozen other great racers belonged to him.

Keene was in the vortex of speculation once when suddenly it was noticed that he began to lose interest. He had foreseen the end and was unloading his securities and stocks as fast as he could. His fellow brokers called him crazy.

At the top of the market he had emptied his strong boxes. Gold stocks that had been selling at $500 and $600 a share dropped like lead and continued to fall. Mr. Keene drew out of the market with a fortune of $6,000,000, and soon after that the Bank of California failed. The president of the institution in despair threw himself into the Pacific. Here it was that James R. Keene performed an important public service, for largely through him a guarantee fund of $8,000,000 was raised with which to pay depositors, and of this he subscribed a million himself. When the atmosphere cleared somewhat Mr. Keene, who was still in ill health, crossed the continent to New York on his way to a long vacation in Europe. He scented a bigger game here than he had ever played. The street was a challenge to the audacity of the man trained in the adventurous west. The lure of the metropolis held him.

Going After Gould.

One of the stories told of Mr. Keene is that one day he saw Jay Gould in Broadway.

"I have $4,000,000," he said. "I guess I will go after that man's scalp." The conflict did not come then and there, as for a time he and Mr. Gould were on good terms and were allies in several operations. When the clash came, years later, and disaster overtook the house of Keene one of its choicest possessions, a picture by Rosa Bonheur, was sold in meeting a debt. Mr. Gould bought it, so the sequel goes, and hung it in his house at Fifth avenue and Forty-seventh street and ever afterward designated it as "Jim Keene's Scalp."

The break between the men was due to a little dispute in which Major J. R. Selover, a Keene follower, wound up with throwing Jay Gould down an areaway. Mr. Gould, still smarting under the indignity, went to his office and started some things which made the major $20,000 poorer before the day was done.

TURKEY PEEVED OVER PROSPECT

Complains That Europe Is Not Giving Fair Deal.

SITUATION GROWING COMPLEX

With a Suspension of the Peace Conference, There Are Many Rumors but Few Facts Bearing on Probable Outcome of Strained Situation, but General Opinion Is That the Powers Will Be Compelled to Take a Hand.

London, Jan. 8.—So far as known, neither side has taken any steps since the suspension of the sitting Monday, and many rumors but little fact seems to summarize the Turko-Balkan situation for the moment. Everybody seems to be waiting on the powers, but although the ambassadorial conference is understood to have discussed the question, nothing as yet appears to have been done by them or the European governments to solve the problem.

It is generally conceded that the powers are completely as one in determining that peace must be maintained, but beyond a rather vague statement from Berlin as to what they propose to do, there is nothing to show as to how they propose to maintain peace. Many of the commentators, who including one who has been referred to frequently in these dispatches, believe that the powers have not yet decided how to go to work.

There are reports that they intend to exert pressure on Turkey by informing her that they would regard the resumption of hostilities with "the utmost displeasure." Nothing is said about exerting similar pressure on the allies.

The recently reported willingness of the powers to mediate is now denied, though unofficially, and they are stated to be willing only to "exert influence" toward a settlement, but it is declared that they have been exerting influence throughout the negotiations, and the only result thus far has been a deadlock. One leading commentator intimates that the suspension, instead of the rupture of the negotiations, was due to their instigation. If this is accurate, what is ascribed here to the allies as "a most brilliant idea" is the first fruits of the efforts of united Europe.

The Turks seem to be very sore at their position. A prominent Turk in London is quoted as saying: "By losing a campaign we seem to have lost even our right to fair play and justice, and, worse still, to have caused Europe to lose its sense of equity. An episode with which the last scene of the conference culminated is characteristic of the emancipation of a section of the present generation from the trammels of political ethics. With anti-Semitism one must now associate anti-Islamism as one of the forms of latter-day culture. Is it the price that well-meaning Europe is prepared to pay for peace? The allies have employed much ingenuity, say rather astuteness, in overreaching us, and many of the bystanders rapturously applaud. Is it because the Turks are quitting Europe?"

"Would it not be more manly and more moral to drive us thence without dissimulating the aim than to do it by abusing the forms of debate? We have not been fairly treated at the conference, and decline to disguise the fact. We now appeal to the world of western civilization. We agreed to negotiate and came to the hospitable shores of Great Britain for this purpose. There have been no negotiations and only the one-sided draft of a treaty which was followed by an ultimatum."

Illinois Contest Promises to Be Spirited.

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 8.—As a strong effort will be made by the Republicans and Progressives to force such a course, the first ballot by the legislature for United States senator for the place once filled by William Lorimer, may be taken tomorrow at noon. The construction placed by the interested politicians upon the resolution of the United States senate which declared the election of Lorimer to have been invalid is that the first business of the legislature after its organization is to proceed immediately with the election of a senator. The theory is that every construction of the federal statutes governing the election of United States senators and prescribing the manner thereof, construed along with the peculiar wording of the resolution which ended the senatorial career of Mr. Lorimer, makes it mandatory for the two houses of the Illinois legislature to assemble at the first noon after organization and to proceed to ballot.

Congressman Martin B. Madden of Chicago will be a short term candidate. Congressman William B. McKinley of Champaign and Congressman William A. Rodenburg of East St. Louis also will permit their names to go before the legislature. Former Speaker Shurtliff may be a candidate and so may former Governor Richard Yates. The Progressives will have Medill McCormick as their candidate.

The Democratic strength for the short term is assured to National Committeeman Charles Boeschstein of Edwardsville. The disposition, apparently, is to leave the long term fight, which does not come to a vote until Jan. 21, between Colonel James Hamilton Lewis, Democrat, Lawrence Y. Sherman, Republican, and Barney Berlin, Socialist, each of whom won his senatorial nomination in the direct primaries last April.

ARCHBALD CASE NEARS END

Long Trial in the Senate Drawing to a Close.

Washington, Jan. 8.—With the conclusion of the cross-examination of Judge Robert W. Archbald of the United States commerce court, the taking of testimony in the impeachment case in which he is respondent, was closed and the senate, after considering the matter in executive session, reached an agreement allowing three days for arguments on the law and facts.

Judge Archbald was subjected to a rigid cross-examination. He said it had never occurred to him that his influence as a judge might have had its effect to induce the railroad companies to grant him options on culm property that would not have been accorded the ordinary citizen. He denied that he had ever told W. J. Williams, his associate in the business of securing options on coal property, that he could bring the Erie railroad to terms because he had pending before him at the time the lighterage cases in which the railroad was interested.

A DEADLY WRECK ON THE BIG FOUR

Fast Train Piles Up In the Ditch Near Lafayette.

ONE KILLED; THIRTY INJURED

Of the Latter a Half Dozen Are Not Expected to Survive, While Many Others Are Suffering Injuries Which May Terminate Seriously—Rail Disaster Thought to Be Due to Broken Truck on the Baggage Car of Flyer.

Lafayette, Ind., Jan. 8.—When a Big Four passenger train was wrecked at Rex, a small station twelve miles south of this city, one man was killed and more than thirty passengers were injured, five of them probably fatally. The train was nearly half an hour behind time and was being run at a high rate of speed in an attempt to make up lost time. A driving sleetstorm made traffic perilous.

The wreck was caused, it is thought, by the trucks of the baggage car becoming loosened and the tire of one of the wheels ripping off, sending the trucks off the track. The engine, tender and mail coach, ahead of the baggage car, did not leave the rails. The smoker and one other day coach, with the baggage car, were thrown down an embankment, while the diner and Pullman cars were upset but remained across the tracks.

A relief train from this city carried a score of doctors and as many nurses to care for the injured.

The dead—Irwin Zunner, twenty-eight years old, Rochester, N. Y.

Fatally injured—Reuben Akesson, Connersville, Ind.; Victor Nickolson, Dwight, Ill.; Theodore Ingalls, colored, train porter, Chicago; Elmer Leary, Lafayette, Ind.; unidentified man, unconscious since accident.

Seriously injured—Harry J. Pfeiffer, Connersville, Ind.; W. C. Patterson, Indianapolis; J. C. Bushman, Indianapolis; Leonard Congill, conductor, Indianapolis; James Darmond, express messenger, Cincinnati; Charles Baird, Indianapolis, fireman; W. Voigt, Albany, N. Y.; H. H. Lovelace, Boston; C. E. Powers, Cincinnati; W. D. Kennedy, Cincinnati; W. C. Jaques, Thornstown; George Montgomery, Chicago; J. Herman Wiebers, Otterbein, Ind.; Hiram W. Moore, Indianapolis; J. Gerlinger, New York city; Frank Buschmann, Indianapolis; Anna McKee, Terre Haute; Mr. and Mrs. Paul Townsend and two children, five and two years old, and nurse, Ada Matthews, Indianapolis; Bessie Grimes, Indianapolis; Janet G. Fisher, Boston; Mrs. Stella Gallup, Evanston, Ill.; Lucius C. Mullens, Indianapolis; G. A. Ammerman, Greensburg, Ind.; Conductor Schelcher, Cincinnati; J. E. Thornburg, Anderson, Ind.; James W. Turner, Greensburg, Ind.; I. L. Webster, Ames, Ia.

The baggage car was the first to leave the tracks. The trucks doubled under it, breaking the coupling between it and the mail car ahead. The baggage car crumpled up and plunged down a ten-foot embankment at the left side of the track, a pile of debris. The smoking car, next behind the baggage coach, left the track on the right side, turned a complete somersault and landed on end at the bottom of the bank. The next day coach went down the embankment on the right and piled up alongside the smoking car. The third day coach, the Pullman cars and diner remained at the top of the embankment, but were turned on their sides.

The wreck occurred one-half mile west of Stockwell and immediately after the pileup people from that town rushed to the scene to give aid to the injured, taking out many who were pinned down by the debris. One baby but a few months old was taken out of the second day coach, which had plunged down the embankment. The little one was not even scratched.

A number of women were trapped in the women's coach after the accident and were rescued by relief workers who cut out the side of the car with axes. The women were hysterical and the sight of the more seriously injured who were lying alongside the tracks made the condition worse.

When the relief special arrived the rescued injured were lying alongside the tracks in the sleet. They were at once ordered taken to nearby farm houses and to homes in Stockwell. As soon as possible all of the injured who had been taken from the wreck were placed on a special train and brought to this city, where they were taken to the local hospitals.
